Hillary Elliott

Public Policy Director

Hillary Elliott has a background in education public policy in both the nonprofit and government sectors. As Public Policy Director at Parents as Teachers, she develops and leads a comprehensive effort to promote Parents as Teachers as an effective early childhood and school readiness strategy among policy-makers at the national, state and local levels.

Elliott serves as a lobbyist for Parents as Teachers in Congress and in the Missouri Legislature and coordinates advocacy activities for the Parents as Teachers network in both national and state policy arenas. In addition, she represents Parents as Teachers in national home visiting coalitions and facilitates state level home visiting coalition building.

Previously, Elliott served as the director of advocacy and communications for the Missouri Charter Public School Association where she oversaw the organization's legislative agenda and coordinated advocacy activities as well as managed both media relations and internal and external communication systems.

Elliott's background also includes experience in Missouri Governor Matt Blunt's administration as an education and child welfare policy advisor where she monitored issues from early childhood to higher education. She holds a bachelor's degree in political science from Oklahoma State University. Elliott also serves as a founding board member for South City Preparatory Academy.

Our Vision: All children will learn, grow and develop to realize their full potential.
